Cordiner Plan—Pentagon Bill Compared

A detailed comparison of the Cordiner Plan and the Administration's Pay Bill will be of interest of all members of the Armed Forces, particularly those on the retired lists. The Defense Department bill, reversing a Cordiner recommendation, seeks no increased benefits for retired persons. Page 2

Pentagon Rejects Force-Out Halt

Secretary of Defense Neil H. McElroy has rejected a request by the House Armed Services Committee leadership that force-outs of Reserve officers be halted. As a consequence, a new Congressional inquiry will be launched. Page 3

Foundering "Hump" Plan Could Force RIFs

Navy-Marine Corps "hump" legislation has taken a strange twist on Capitol Hill. The Navy plan is foundering. If it dies, hundreds of additional Reserve officers face RIFs. At the same time, the Marines appear to be winning their battle to force the early retirement of twice-passed-over colonels and lieutenant colonels. Page 6

Air Force Missile Defense Pushed

A multi-million dollar authorization is being rushed through Congress to boost Strategic Air Command facilities, step-up the dispersal of SAC bases, expand the SAGE system and increase the ballistic missile and ballistic-missile-detection program. There's also funds for the new ARPA set-up. Page 8

Future Weapons Up, Present Forces Down

National press attention to the President's fiscal '59 budget accented the emphasis on missiles and other new weapons. Given relatively less attention than in past years are the substantial cuts in manpower and force levels for all the Services. Page 11

Defense Study May Bring New Laws

Military manpower, weapons, funds, command and planning functions, and roles and missions will receive careful study by the House Armed Services Committee in the weeks ahead. The Committee launched its full-scale investigation of the Nation's defense posture on 13 January with the promise of "prompt action" in areas which require legislation. Page 25

NSIA Fights Pentagon Proposal

Adoption of a proposed draft which would revise existing Armed Services Procurement Regulation will have "adverse effect" on the defense program, according to the National Security Industrial Association. The proposed revisions would drive small business out of Government business, the Association charges. Page 26

Revamp Industry Planning

The threat of massive attacks against the United States makes necessary revisions in industrial planning. This need has been communicated to Congress by the Defense Department. Page 27

Soften Officer-Punishment Plan

Officers punished by their CO's for minor misconduct would receive stiffer penalties under revised UCMJ rules proposed by the Pentagon, but they would still fare better than they would have under an earlier plan. Requested changes in the justice code also give CO's increased authority to punish enlisted men. Page 28

New Pay Scales For Fighting Forces

These are the new rates proposed in the $518,000,000 military pay bill which reached Capitol Hill on 14 January. They include creation of two new officer and two new enlisted ranks. The table shows years of service in grade and monthly pay rates.

Pay Raise Sought For 1,820,000;
House Group Set For Early Action

(Complete Details, Statement Texts, Pages 2, 3)

Powerfully supported by President Eisenhower and Secretary of Defense Neil H. McElroy, a $518,000,000 military pay bill—certain to be controversial in some omissions—is set for early action on Capitol Hill.

The bill, which would be effective 1 July 1958, provides minimum increases of 6 per cent for 1,820,000 officers and enlisted men.

This is 70 per cent of the total active duty strength planned for the start of the new fiscal year.

Rep. Kilday

Everyone on active duty with at least two years service would get at least a 6 per cent increase. A larger raise goes to about 27 per cent of active duty personnel who benefit by Cordiner Plan recommendations that are above the 6 per cent increase.

Nothing is asked for those on the retired lists. This Budget Bureau-imposed deletion is certain to provoke strong protests before Congressional committees.

The bill will be taken up as a priority matter by a House Armed Services Subcommittee under Representative Paul J. Kilday (D-Tex.).

The Senate Armed Services Subcommittee, headed by Senator John Stennis (D-Miss), which has held a single day's hearing on Cordiner legislation, will step aside to let the House group have a first crack at the revolutionary new pay plan.

Funds for the pay increase are provided in the President's fiscal '59 budget. A total of $518,000,000 is asked in new obligatory authority for the pay hike, with $508,000,000 forecast in actual expenditures for the year starting 1 July.

Chairman Carl Vinson (D-Ga.) of the House Armed Services Committee introduced the Administration pay bill on 14 January.

Representative Kilday told a JOURNAL reporter he wanted to study the measure carefully before making any detailed remarks.

Asked for comments on the failure of the Administration to seek increased pay for retired persons, Mr. Kilday said that he wanted also to go into that matter carefully.

A major factor in the pay bill timetable on Capitol Hill is the schedule that will be maintained by the full House Armed Services Committee, currently conducting a comprehensive inquiry into the Nation's defense posture (see page 25).

A possibility exists that Chairman Vinson will eliminate afternoon sessions and thereby permit the Armed Services Subcommittees, including Mr. Kilday's group, to hold hearings on pending legislation, highlighted by the pay measure.

Another likely area of close scrutiny on Capitol Hill will be the situation which could result in a loss of base pay for some enlisted men who become officers.

The Cordiner Committee is known to have explored this problem at great length, with the final decision being that the principle of equal pay for equal rank should be upheld.

It was the feeling of the Cordiner Com-

SECDEF MCELROY TELLS PAY RAISE PREMISES

Secretary of Defense Neil H. McElroy, in a letter of transmittal to Congress, said the new pay plan is premised on four basic compensation principles:

1. "The compensation system must be designed to encourage meritorious performance . . ."

2. "The compensation system must provide a pay structure that reflects more accurately the particular gradation of skill and experience represented in the varying needs of different Service situations . . ."

3. "The compensation system must provide compensation levels which are reasonably comparable to those paid people employed elsewhere in similar positions and occupations . . ."

4. "Without basic patriotism on the part of its members, there can be no Armed Forces. However, in times of peace, patriotism alone is not a sufficient motivation for a career in the Armed Forces. The members of the military establishment must receive sufficient compensation to enable them to discharge their responsibilities to both their country AND (the Secretary's emphasis) their families."

Pentagon Tells Details Of Changes Made In Cordiner Pay Recommendations

THE Defense Department has made available the following comments on the relationship between Cordiner Committee pay recommendations and the Administration's military pay proposal that was sent to Congress 14 January.

GENERAL

The Department of Defense Military Pay Proposal is based on the compensation principles recommended by the Cordiner Committee.

In addition to the areas studied by the Committee, special consideration has been given to phasing, timing and up-dating the new pay system. Careful study has been made of the pay recommended for General and Flag Officers and of the pay for all personnel retired prior to enactment of the proposed legislation.

As a result of this study, the Department of Defense proposal contains the following provisions not included in the Cordiner Committee Report:

CONVERSION PLAN. Since the primary purpose of the new system is to improve quality, a phase-in period for officers and warrant officers is provided. This will permit effective management of the new system and minimize immediate pay increases. Enlisted personnel automatically phase into the new system with the establishment of two new pay grades and enlisted management is assured by selective application of proficiency advances, reenlistment controls, and retraining.

COST-OF-LIVING INCREASE. A 6% cost-of-living increase is provided to all personnel with over two years' service who do not receive an equivalent increase under the new pay scales. This feature will provide affected personnel a standard of living equal to that granted in the last pay legislation as the Consumer Price Index has risen approximately 6% since the last military pay raise. Personnel with under two years' service are not included since the majority of them are furnished items which make up the Price Index; they were not in the Armed Forces at the time of the last pay raise, and they are serving their period of draft obligation.

PAY OF CURRENTLY RETIRED. The Department of Defense proposal does not change the pay of currently retired personnel. These personnel have not and will not be subjected to the management program which is an integral part of higher pay for greater contribution. The new pay scales are designed to retain quality personnel on active duty and have little application to personnel retired prior to enactment of the new system.

REVISED ACTIVE DUTY SUPPLEMENT. The Active Duty Supplement for General and Flag Officers has been reduced. This action will lower slightly the active duty pay for these officers but will not affect their retired pay. In this manner, little incentive is lost and the top military pay is made more comparable to that of other top government executives.

RESERVE OFFICER TERM RETENTION PLAN. This incentive is included in the legislation and contains all of the provisions of H.R. 7473 which was recommended by the Defense Department last session of Congress. This differs in minor respects with the recommended plan contained in the Cordiner Report. Differences are outlined in more detail in section below.

SPECIFIC

Cordiner Report

1. No conversion plan.
2. No cost-of-living adjustment.
3. Applies new rates and system to currently retired.
4. Provides monthly Active Duty Supplement for General and Flag Officers as follows:

0-10	$300
0-9	250
0-8	200
0-7	150
5. Reserve Retention Plan:
 - a. Minimum contract for 1 year.
 - b. Contract could be entered into at any time after commissioning.
 - c. If as much as 6 years are served under contract, term retention credit would be given for years under contract plus years served immediately before first contract (but not more than 3).
 - d. Payment of Term Retention Pay is made to survivors if death occurs while on active duty in addition to other benefits.
 - e. In computing Reserve Officer Term Retention Pay $\frac{1}{2}$ year or more of service is computed as 1 year—less than $\frac{1}{2}$ year is ignored.
 - f. Applicable to all officers.

Defense Proposal

1. Provides phased conversion for officers and warrant officers by limiting dollar increase in monthly basic pay by grade in any one year (roughly equivalent to one-fourth of the maximum increase under the new scale) (see details below.)
2. Provides a minimum 6% increase in base pay for all personnel with over two years' service.
3. Does not change the pay of personnel retired prior to enactment of new law.
4. Provides monthly Active Duty Supplement for General and Flag Officers as follows:

0-10	$ 0
0-9	0
0-8	50
0-7	100
5. Reserve Retention Plan:
 - a. Minimum contract for 2 years.
 - b. Eligible to contract after 2 years' commissioned service.
 - c. No retroactive payments. (Pay only for years under contract).
 - d. No payment of Term Retention Pay if death occurs on active duty (as the officer's family is receiving survivor benefits).
 - e. In computing Reserve Officer Term Retention Pay years and fractions of years are used.
 - f. Not applicable to medical, dental or veterinary officers.

SecDef McElroy Seeks Pay Raise Action; Retention Is Major Manpower Problem

SECRETARY of Defense Neil H. McElroy opened the Pentagon's fight for a military pay raise with testimony before the House Armed Services Committee on 13 January. Reporting on Pentagon budget and force level plans, the Secretary placed the pay discussion last "because I want to dwell on it."

Here is what the Secretary told the legislators:

"Attracting and retaining the kind of people needed for the leadership of our forces and for the special skills required in an increasing percentage of our enlisted personnel has become our major manpower problem.

"Excessive Turnover" Told

"The currently excessive turnover of our key personnel—officers and enlisted men—is seriously detracting from our combat capability. The development of highly skilled electronic maintenance men and operators, fire control specialists, aircraft mechanics and missile men requires from 5 to 10 years—for their formal training must be supplemented with experience on the job. Yet, in these skills, our reenlistment rates are lowest.

"Skilled combat leaders also are not reenlisting in the numbers we desire. When these men leave the Service, they not only take with them thousands of dollars worth of training, but they leave the Armed Forces with the costly task of starting all over again with raw recruits. Among officers the problem is equally if not more serious.

"There is full support within the Department of Defense for the military manpower program recommended by the Cordiner Committee. Implementation of this program will require legislative action by the Congress and positive management action by the Department of Defense. These actions are interdependent—neither can effectively operate alone.

Describes New System

"This proposed compensation system is based on the pay principles recommended by the Cordiner Committee and is designed to increase the emphasis on merit, proficiency and responsibility and reduce the emphasis on longevity.

"It seems inadequate to concern ourselves with the development of modern weapons and the application of advanced technology to our military problems except as we also train and retain the officers and men needed. It has become evident that the future security of our nation will require increasingly competent personnel in the Active Duty armed forces. Career-minded men and women of high aptitude and dedication are required to assure a state of immediate combat readiness in our operational units. The Department of Defense is convinced that the modernization of the military pay structure which will be recommended is an important step in the long range solution of our manpower problems."

Senator Goldwater Urges Cordiner Without Delay

Senator Barry Goldwater (R-Ariz) has called on Congress to enact the Cordiner Report "without delay."

The Senator, a co-sponsor with Senator Stuart Symington (D-Mo) of the military pay proposal already before the Senate Armed Services Committee, said he believes "there is sufficient unanimity of opinion in the Congress to enact these recommendations into law," and "I believe we should do so without delay."

He told the Senate that the Cordiner recommendations "are excellently designed to alleviate the problems that we all know to exist in the personnel structure of our Armed Forces."

Senator Goldwater said he was "very pleased" to hear President Eisenhower say, in his State of the Union message, "that, in his opinion, one of the necessary things to do in this session of Congress was to create an incentive pay plan for the personnel of our military services."

Outmoded Pay Scales Are "Survival Threat"

Representative James Van Zandt (Pa), a member of the House Armed Services Committee, told Congress January that outmoded military pay scales are "a positive threat to our national survival by weakening our Armed Forces in precisely the areas in which it is crucial that we be strong."

The Congressman stressed the need for skilled manpower "in the operation and maintenance of the increasingly complex weapons upon which our national survival depends."

Mr. Van Zandt, who has sponsored Cordiner Plan legislation, said: "The present system of remuneration for military personnel . . . is first of all uneconomic; it actually costs us more than would a system of higher wages paid to selected personnel. Second, it is wasteful of our manpower resources and tends to drive out of the service the people that the Services most desperately need and wish to retain."

Lt. Gen. Quesada Asks Flight Changes

Lt. Gen. E. R. Quesada, USAF-Ret., heading an investigation for President Eisenhower, has recommended a new airport for the Metropolitan Washington area at Chantilly, Va. He urged that flight operations at Bolling AFB and Anacostia NAS be suspended.

General Quesada advised the President that these operations should be shifted to Andrews AFB "as a requirement to realizing the maximum safe utilization of the airspace and airports serving the National Capital region."

The shift of flight operations to Andrews would require many Pentagon-based officers to travel considerably farther than is now the case to get in proficiency training. In the past, the Services have resisted efforts to shut down flight operations at Bolling and Anacostia, but in view of the stature of General Quesada's study, new vocal protests are expected.

Additional details and further analysis of the military pay raise legislation and the fiscal '59 budget will be a feature of next week's issue of THE JOURNAL.

Sec'y. On Army Info

Secretary of the Army Wilber M. Brucker has prepared an article for publication in next week's issue of THE JOURNAL on "The Information Officer and the Army's Mission." The Secretary will tell the importance of the public information program to overall Army effectiveness.

Arctic Test Center

U. S. soldiers stationed with the U. S. Army First Arctic Test Center at Fort Churchill in Manitoba, Canada, have the difficult task of supporting the research of testing cold weather equipment. To do this they often have to drive the polar bears away with helicopters. Next week's JOURNAL will tell the story of this unusual operation.

CONGRESS READS JOURNAL STORY

TIME Magazine's feature article (6 January) on the ARMY NAVY AIR FORCE JOURNAL has been reprinted in the 14 January issue of the Congressional Record at the request of Representative Paul J. Kilday (D-Tex).

Congressman Kilday, third-ranking Democrat on the House Armed Services Committee, noted that TIME labels the JOURNAL "the best informed and most influential military publication in the United States."

He said "for more than 94 years many Members of the House have enriched their knowledge of important military developments by reading the ARMY NAVY AIR FORCE JOURNAL."

"During this long period, dating from the 1st session of the 38th Congress, the JOURNAL by quietly prodding, probing and reciting hard facts, has aided the Nation in maintaining strong defenses, in erasing injustices and inequities in the Armed Forces, and in keeping the Congress, the administration, the top civilian leaders of the Armed Forces, and the people of our country ever alert to the changing needs of our Defense Establishment and of our men and women in uniform," Mr. Kilday said.

"Because the article will be of interest to all Members of the Congress," Congressman Kilday said, "I am inserting it in the Record for all to read."

"Recast" Military Pay, President Urges

The following statement on the need for a military pay raise was made by President Eisenhower in his Budget Message to Congress on 13 January.

WITH the development of new weapons systems, the technical proficiency demanded of military personnel has increased tremendously. Personnel trained at great expense in the operation and maintenance of these modern weapons must have greater incentives to remain in service. For present and long-range efficiency and for greater equity, the military pay system must be recast. Minimizing the present large turnover in military personnel will reduce the percentage of men in training and add to the percentage of men assigned to combat missions.

The funds provided in this budget for military personnel are based on achieving these objectives and on making the changes in pay rates effective on July 1, 1958. The funds for the Department of Defense also include an

The following table shows how the six per cent pay increase proposed by the President will affect the monthly pay of officers and warrant officers with more than two years service. The figures are rounded to the nearest multiple of 30 cents. The top figure is present pay; the six per cent increase is shown below:

Pentagon Refuses To Halt "RIF" Action, House Group Plans Special Session

THE Defense Department has turned thumbs down on a proposal to halt Reserve officer RIFs.

As a result of the Pentagon rejection, the Brooks House Armed Services Subcommittee scheduled a meeting for 18 January at 10:00 to look into the situation.

Representative Overton Brooks (D-La) told THE JOURNAL on 15 January that the Defense Department has "turned down" his request to suspend further RIFs, pending a study by his subcommittee of the problems involved.

Congressman Brooks and Chairman Carl Vinson (D-Ga) of the full committee wrote to Secretary of Defense Neil H. McElroy 7 January (THE JOURNAL 11 January) to ask that the RIF program be postponed.

Secretary McElroy replied that the Department would issue no further RIF orders.

Chairman Vinson retorted in a second communication to the Pentagon that he wished to make it clear "that our recommendation was that the reduction in force program should be stopped and that no more Reserve officers be involuntarily released."

Mr. Vinson said this would mean "that those Reserve officers who previously received a notification of release would have such notification cancelled and be retained on active duty" until the Committee had an opportunity to review the program with Representative Brooks and the subcommittee.

"Cruel Treatment"

Chairman Vinson's second letter brought a further reply from the Pentagon, Congressman Brooks told THE JOURNAL, that the Defense Department "would not look with favor on giving so much as a temporary delay to the involuntary release of these Reserve officers."

Later, on the House floor, Mr. Brooks said that "in my 21 years in Congress, it is difficult for me to recall a single instance when the military services have acted in such a cruel and despot manner toward the officers serving in their ranks."

JCS CHIEFS ADVISE

Secretary of Defense Neil H. McElroy has announced that three of the nation's top-ranking military officers have agreed to help him draft plans for reorganization of the Pentagon.

At the same time, he said that a number of other military experts and civilian leaders would assist with the reorganization plans.

He said his principal military consultants will be General Nathan Twining, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and his two predecessors in the post, Admiral Arthur W. Radford and General of the Army Omar Bradley.

The Secretary made his statement following a closed-door session with the House Armed Services Committee on 15 January.

Pentagon Explains Pay Conversion

The following is the explanation provided by the Department of Defense on the method that will be used for putting into effect pay increases for officers and warrant officers. The explanation was released when the Pentagon sent to Congress the $518 million pay legislation.

A special, temporary rule has been provided with respect to increases in pay for commissioned officers and warrant officers. Application of the rule involves several steps. If an officer's present pay plus 6% is greater than the new pay scales provide, he will receive a 6% increase (if less than 2 years' service, no 6% increase is provided). If the new pay scales are greater, he would be entitled to receive during the first three years after the effective date of the proposed legislation the step-increases prescribed in the following table:

Pay Grade	1st Year	2d Year	3d Year
O-10	$200	$300	$400
O-9	100	200	300
O-8	100	200	300
O-7	100	200	300
O-6	75	150	225
O-5 through W-1	50	100	150

The amounts shown in the above table are cumulative. They represent the maximum increase that may be paid to the member over the amount he was entitled to receive on the day before the effective date of the Act. At the beginning of the fourth year following the effective date of the Act, any difference that might remain between the "then" pay of the member and the applicable Cordiner rate is added so as to put the member on the full Cordiner rate.

A very important subsection of the revised draft also provides in effect that a member's cumulative years of service for the computation of basic pay under the rules set forth above, are frozen as of the day before the effective date of the Act. Such a provision is necessary to prevent inequities and inconsistencies which would otherwise arise during the phase-in period in computing the pay of officers upon promotion.

In the case of a member O-5 through O-8 (whose pay under the new scales will consist in part of an "active-duty supplement") the revised draft legislation also provides that until the "phase-in" of the member concerned to the proper rate is completed, any pay increases received during the phase-in period will be considered as applying to bring his basic pay up to the applicable rate. Thus any increased pay (up to the prescribed new rate) would be included in computing his retired pay if he should retire prior to being fully phased in under the new rates.

The Army released late this week S.O. 10, dated 15 January, which listed promotions to temporary lieutenant colonel, major and captain. Names will be published in next week's issue of THE JOURNAL.

The cutoff date for lieutenant colonel was 27 November 1950 with 184 months and 15 days of service.

The cutoff for major was 28 October 1950.

For captain the cutoff date was 27 February 1953.

Lt. Gen. Palmer Gets 6th Army Post; Gen. Ruffner Will Go Third Army

Lt. Gen. Charles D. Palmer, Deputy Commanding General of the Eighth Army and Commanding General, U.S. Army Japan, will succeed Lt. Gen. Lemuel Mathewson as Commanding General of the Sixth Army at the Presidio of San Francisco.

General Mathewson will retire 31 March for physical disability after 35 years' service.

Lt. Gen. Emerson L. Cummings, Chief of Ordnance, will replace General Palmer on 1 March.

In another general officer shift, the Army said this week that Maj. Gen. Clark

L. Ruffner, Chief of the MAAG in Germany, who previously had been ordered to the Fifth Army at Chicago, now will be assigned to the Third Army at Ft. McPherson, Ga., on 1 May.

There was speculation that General Ruffner's assignment to McPherson may be linked to the forthcoming retirement of Lt. Gen. Thomas F. Hickey, Third Army Commander.

It was also announced that Maj. Gen. Richard W. Stephens, Chief of Military History, would go to the Sixth Army in late April.

President Tells '59 Force Plans

Here is what President Eisenhower had to say about the Army in his fiscal '59 message to Congress:

ARMY—The Army with an active duty military personnel strength of 870,000 on June 30, 1959 will support 14 divisions, 6 regiments, 1 armored combat command, 2 brigades, and 3 separate battle groups. This compares with an active Army strength of 1,109,000 men, 20 divisions, and 12 regiments and regimental combat teams in 1955. However, 3 separate battle groups and 4 missile commands have been organized since 1955, to permit a closer tailoring of forces to particular missions. The Army will complete the reorganization of its divisions along pentomic lines during the current year, thus providing these divisions with an organic atomic capability.

In addition, the Army will have 4 missile commands compared with none at the end of 1955 and a considerably larger number of separate surface-to-surface missile battalions. Although the total number of antiaircraft battalions will decline from 122 to 86 from 1955 through 1959, the number of guided missile antiaircraft battalions will more than double. The reduction is primarily in 90 and 120-mm AAA gun battalions which are now of limited combat effectiveness. By June 30, 1959, there will only be 1 such gun battalion left in the Army. There will, however, still be a number of "sky sweeper" battalions and a number of self-propelled automatic weapons battalions for the protection of the Army in the field.

The great increase in the unit effectiveness of Army antiaircraft battalions is not evident in the above figures. In 1959 an appreciable proportion of the guided missile battalions will have been converted from Nike Ajax to Nike Hercules missiles. The latter are not only vastly superior in altitude and range but will be capable of using atomic warheads.

Army aviation will continue to expand, particularly with respect to helicopters. The active aircraft inventory of the Army on June 30, 1959 is expected to be over 50% greater than on June 30, 1955.

Army Colonels Move

COL. GEORGE W. McCAFFERY, who has been Post and 1st Infantry Division Chief of Staff, Ft. Riley, Kans., will take command of the 26th Infantry in February. He will succeed Col. Charles L. Jackson, who will leave 10 February. Colonel and Mrs. McCaffery reside with their two children at 332 Pershing Ave., Ft. Riley.

COL. SYLVESTER T. DEL CORSO, former Augsburg Area Commander in Germany, has been assigned as Chief of the Fourth Army National Guard Division, Reserve Forces Section, Ft. Sam Houston, Tex. With his wife, Emma, and three children he will reside on the post.

COL. FRANKLIN R. SIBERT has been assigned as Commanding Officer of the 2d Training Regiment, Ft. Leonard Wood, Mo. He replaces Lt. Col. James R. Showers, who has assumed the duties of Executive Officer.

COL. MARCUS M. ADAMS, former Army Advisor to the I Corps of the Imperial Iranian Army, has been named Chief of the Personnel Group of the Army Infantry School's Staff Department, Ft. Benning, Ga. He replaces Col. Paul J. Jarrett, who has assumed the duties of Infantry Center Comptroller.

New Gordon Commander

Col. Paul T. Snowden succeeded Col. Justin W. Stoll as Ft. Gordon, Ga., commander 18 January.

Colonel Snowden had been Deputy Post Commander at Ft. Carson, Colo. Colonel Stoll will depart for assignment at Ft. Riley, Kans., where he will be Executive Officer, First Division Artillery, First Infantry Division.

THE ARMY H-23D . . .

HELICOPTER WITH TOMORROW BUILT IN

Design of the basic H-23 helicopter was largely governed by a doctrine of ruggedness. It has produced a dependable helicopter, with a record of safety unequalled in its class.

Now, in the H-23D, a completely new 1000-hour+ drive system is introduced, seen as a major break-through in lower operating costs. A full-time 250 horsepower is available and, significantly, without "redline" restrictions warning of jeopardized service life. Thus, ruggedness has also afforded growth potential.

In the H-23D, growth potential assumes a new importance. Its existing components are designed to accept even greater power increases for the future's most challenging performance demands. Now, more than ever, the Army H-23 is an investment in tomorrow.

General Berkeley Tells Marine Plans To Force Retirement Of Col's, Lt. Col's

Legislation to solve the Marine Corps "hump" problem may be divorced from the overall Navy proposal and considered as a separate plan.

Although the Navy section of the "hump" bill appears to be in trouble before the Kilday House Armed Services Subcommittee (see adjacent story), Chairman Paul J. Kilday (D-Tex) told THE JOURNAL it may be necessary "to do something for the Marine Corps, since they have a different problem."

Brig. Gen. James P. Berkeley, Assistant Chief of Staff, G-1, testified before the committee on the Marine Corps "hump" problems.

He said the Marines have too many majors who will reach the promotion point to lieutenant colonel between now and June 1962, when year group 1944 will complete 18 years' commissioned service. And, too many lieutenant colonels will reach the promotion point in 1967, '68 and '69.

Affects Year Groups '42, '43, '44

General Berkeley, who was nominated by President Eisenhower this week for two-star rank, pointed out that the Marine Corps "hump" is confined to the year groups 1942, '43 and '44. He said year group 1945 is so nearly normal in size that it will be no problem if the Corps is authorized to ease attrition for the earlier year groups.

The Marines, he said, have no Reserve or temporary officers to release from the "hump" year groups, or senior to these groups. All the necessary vacancies must be created by other means, "namely, attrition of some sort on our permanent Regular officer population."

Under present law, General Berkeley testified, the Marine Corps will not be able to create any significant number of vacancies in the grade of lieutenant colonel through forced attrition until 1963. But, he said, the Corps needs vacancies between now and 1962, when year group 1944 reaches the normal promotion point to lieutenant colonel in its 18th year.

Officers who would be involuntarily retired under the Marine Corps plan are excess numbers in their particular year groups—their respective age groups—General Berkeley said, "but they must not be regarded as a group of substandard performers by any means." He said many may be better than some of their seniors or juniors who have not or will not have such heavy attrition assessed against them.

Majority Are Competent

"The great majority" who will have to be retired from the "hump" are "highly competent career officers who, through no fault of their own whatsoever, are numerically in excess of our requirement in the higher grades for officers of their particular age and years of service." He said the Corps would like to keep them if it could, but to do so would disrupt the careers of other equally worthy but younger officers who, because of their age, have more potential years of useful service to offer.

General Berkeley said the Marine Corps "hump" problem can be solved by removing the Officer Personnel Act provision which authorizes twice-passed over lieutenant colonels to remain on active duty until they complete 26 years' service, and twice-passed over colonels until they complete 30.

Timely Chance For Jr's

With these provisions removed, he said, officers who are eligible for retirement, and who have twice failed of selection for promotion, will be retired. This will "permit other more junior officers to have a timely chance of selection with a reasonable chance of being selected."

The Marine Corps plans to involuntarily retire about 304 colonels and lieutenant colonels during the first five years after the new authority is granted, as follows:

	Colonels	Lt. Colonels
Fiscal '59	82	21
Fiscal '60	16	21
Fiscal '61	13	40

Bill Seeks Changes In USN-USMC Boosts

The Navy and Marine Corps are asking Congress for permanent authority to promote ensigns and second lieutenants at the end of 18 months' service.

The proposal also authorizes back pay for about 3,687 Marine Corps first lieutenants, and validates over-payments for 2700 others.

Under present law, ensigns and second lieutenants are permanently promoted to the next higher grade on completion of three years' service. However, because they are required to fill positions of considerable responsibility within a relatively short time after being initially commissioned, the Navy and Marine Corps have found it "expedient to tem-

Foundering Navy "Hump" Plan Could Force Additional Reserve Officer Reductions

Navy "hump" legislation appears to be foundering before the Kilday House Armed Services Subcommittee.

If the plan is killed—as now appears possible—hundreds of twice-passed-over commanders, and captains with over five years' in grade who have not been selected for flag rank, will win reprieves. Under the proposal, they would be forced to retire early.

But, the Navy believes there will be dire results if the plan dies.

Navy Faces Alternatives

If no legislation is enacted to relieve the current promotion stagnation, the Navy faces two alternatives, neither of which is considered desirable by Navy planners. The Navy would be forced to:

1—Revert or retire hundreds of temporary officers and RIF or demote hundreds of Reservists, or 2—Drastically increase the attrition rate for promotion to the rank of commander. This would mean that two out of every three lieutenant commanders would be passed-over for promotion. The pass-over rate for commanders to captain also would be increased to an undesirable level.

The first alternative has been suggested by the Kilday group as a possible remedy.

Could Draw Fire

Since it threatens only Reservists and temporary officers it could draw heavy fire from the Reserve Officers' Association. And, it is possible, too, that even stronger opposition might come from within the full committee's own ranks where the Brooks Subcommittee stands "vigilant guard over the rights of Reservists."

Both Chairman Carl Vinson (D-Ga) and Representative Overton Brooks (D-La.), have protested current RIF policies.

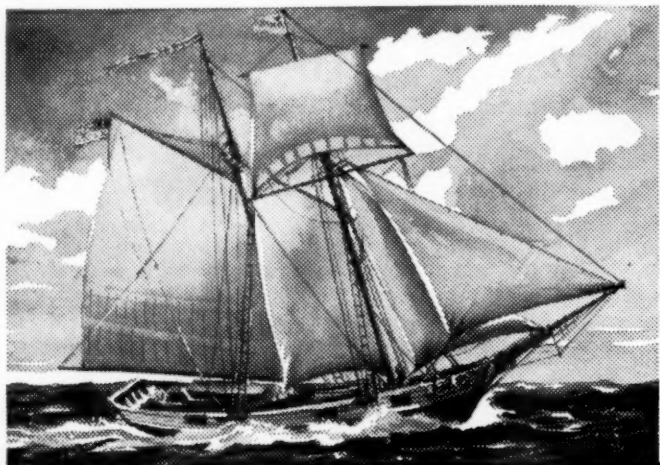

The Navy's plea for legislation to ease the critical promotion problem by releasing large numbers of Regulars has won little support, however, within the ranks of the Kilday Subcommittee.

Fail To Convince Committee

This is largely due to the position taken by Chairman Paul J. Kilday (D-Tex) that the proposal will add to growing retirement costs. Navy witnesses have testified that retirement costs will be greater without the plan than with it, but have failed to convince the committee.

Congressman Kilday also has ascertained that the plan, even though it affects only Regulars, would not safeguard the careers of active-duty Reservists and temporary officers. He questioned VADM. James L. Holloway, jr., Chief of Naval Personnel, closely on this point, and Admiral Holloway admitted that, even with the plan, any future manpower cuts would mean that the Reservists and

Adm. Hopwood New CinC of Pac Fleet

Admiral Herbert G. Hopwood, who relieves Admiral Maurice E. Curtis as Commander in Chief of the U.S. Pacific Fleet, arrived in Hawaii 11 January.

Admiral Hop-wood, who has served in the Office of the Chief of Naval Operations in Washington since July 20, 1956 as the Deputy Chief of Naval Opera-

comer to the Islands, having served as Chief of Staff and Aide to the Commander in Chief of the Pacific Fleet from September 1953 until July of 1955.

Until this week Admiral Curtis had been Deputy CinC with Admiral Felix B.
Stump holding both the title of CinC Pacific, a joint command, and also the Fleet command. The President, however, has now separated the commands so Admiral Curtis becomes Fleet CinC. Admiral Hop-wood will relieve Admiral Curtis on or about 1 February 1958.

Admiral Curtis will assume the Command of the Western Sea Frontier and the Pacific Reserve Fleet with headquarters in San Francisco.

January for a short tour of U.S. Naval facilities in the Pacific. He will make stops in Wake Island, Japan, Okinawa, Hong Kong, Philippines, Guam and Kwajalein.
While in Japan he expects to confer with VAdm. Wallace M. Beakley, Commander of the U.S. Seventh Fleet. The Admiral will return to Pearl Harbor on 23 Jan.

Adm. Hopwood wears the Legion of Merit with combat "V" and gold star in lieu of second award.

SAC MISSILE BASE. General Thomas S. Power (center), SAC CnC, makes an inspection visit to Francis E. Warren AFB, Wyo., recently designated as the first Air Force ICBM missile launching site. He is greeted by Base Commander Col. H. F. Muenster, right, and Col. H. B. Earthman, deputy Base Commander, left.

House Rushes AF Authorization Bill, Gives O.K. For Advanced Research Agency

The House has approved and sent to the Senate legislation authorizing a new $549 million Air Force construction program.

An amendment tacked onto the measure during floor debate 15 January also authorizes the establishment of a new Advanced Research Projects Agency directly under the Secretary of Defense.

Funds in the amount of $10 million for the operation of the Agency are contained in the fiscal '59 budget.

The new authorization program for Air Force construction is part of the $1.26 billion supplemental military appropriation requested by the President. The appropriation measure itself is currently being rushed to completion by the House and Senate Appropriations Committees.

The $549 million program authorizes construction of additional alert facilities for the Strategic Air Command, and further dispersal of SAC's bases. Construction authority also is provided to step up the SAGE, missile and missile-detection programs.

The House Armed Services Committee eliminated an item of $1.4 million for road surfacing at the U.S. Air Force Academy before sending the bill to the floor. The Committee said it took the action "on the basis that this was not an urgent item."

Secretary of Defense Neil H. McElroy said the construction is "urgently needed," when he asked for quick action by the Congress so the Air Force could take advantage of "spring and summer" weather.

House Armed Services Committee Chairman Carl Vinson (D-Ga.) immediately introduced the authorization bill (HR 9739), began hearings on 11 Jan., reported the bill and took it to the House floor on 15 January, where it won overwhelming approval, 374-0.

Explaining the need to increase the Air Force construction program, Secretary McElroy said "Recent developments have necessitated an acceleration in the attainment of certain Air Force operational objectives. These objectives relate principally to ballistic missiles, improved dispersal, readiness and refueling capabilities of the forces of the Strategic Air Command, the semi-automatic ground environment (SAGE) system, and defense against ballistic missiles."

He said "construction of base facilities must be initiated as early as possible to achieve these operational objectives."

The construction plans call for the expenditure of $29,670,000 on the SAGE system, $189 million on a ballistic missile detection system, $112.4 million on ballistic missiles, $24.6 million for alert facilities for SAC, and $194 million for dispersal of SAC forces.

Here is a breakdown, showing the locations of the planned SAGE and SAC construction:

FILLS MISSILE POST

First Missile Division, Cooke AFB, Calif., announces the designation of Col. Richard L. Temple, as Director of Installations Engineering.

Colonel Temple recently returned from duty overseas where he commanded 2d Air Division, Dhahran, Saudi Arabia, and later the base at Karamursel, Turkey.

Col. Myers Commands BOMARC Training Unit

Col. Joseph Myers has been named Commanding Officer of the first BOMARC training unit activated 16 January at Eglin AFB, Fla.

Designated the 4751st Air Defense Missile Wing, the unit will develop and conduct a training program for BOMARC missile crews.

In addition to preparing ground training programs, the Wing will design and develop newer training programs as technological advances are made. The program is designed to have BOMARC missile crews ready when operational squadrons are activated.

Four BOMARC missile sites are slated for activation in Maine, Massachusetts, New York and New Jersey.

The missile is produced by Boeing Airplane Company's Seattle, Wash., plant.

Third Star For Gen. Mundy

President Eisenhower has asked the Senate to confirm the recess appointment of Lt. Gen. George W. Mundy, USAF, in his three-star rank as Commandant of the Industrial College of the Armed Forces.

The President sent General Mundy's nomination to the Senate on 13 January.

MAJ. GEN. EDWARD P. MECHLING, former commander of the Air Force Armament Center, receives the Distinguished Service Medal, one of the nation's highest awards. The medal is being presented by Maj. Gen. John W. Sesums, Jr., vice commander of the Air Research and Development Command, at Air Proving Ground Center, Eglin AFB, Fla.

President Reveals Smaller AF; Seeks Funds Transfer Authority

President Eisenhower, in his annual budget message, disclosed plans for a Fiscal Year 1959 Air Force that will have 850,000 men and 105 Wings. The President told of stepped-up missile power in the Air Force.

In his message, the Chief Executive also asked for new transfer authority of funds, described in the following excerpt from his voluminous budget statement to Congress:

AIR FORCE—The Air Force with an active duty personnel strength of 850,000 will be supporting 105 wings on June 30, 1959, 16 fewer than on June 30, 1955. Part of the reduction, however, occurs in areas where guided missiles are greatly modifying the role of manned aircraft. Most of the remaining reduction is being made in those elements which are of decreasing importance in the light of evolving force requirements. The SAC bomber force will have been greatly strengthened both in numbers and quality of aircraft since 1955. Virtually all SAC bomber wings will be jet equipped by the end of 1959 as the conversion of heavy bomber wings to the B-52 is completed. The number of aircraft in each heavy bomber wing is being increased from 30 B-36's to 45 B-52's. The strategic fighter wings associated with the B-36 bombers have already been phased out of the force and, in consonance with changing requirements, there will be a further reduction of one strategic reconnaissance wing during 1959.

During 1959 the Air Force will begin to show a missile capability in its strategic forces. The introduction of the BOMARC ground-to-air missile will also provide the Air Force with an enhanced guided missile capability in its air defense forces. Virtually all interceptor squadrons will be equipped with the Falcon or Sidewinder air-to-air guided missiles, and a considerable number of squadrons will be equipped with the new nuclear-armed air-to-air rocket Genie. The tactical missile capability of the Air Force will be further improved as the new Mace surface-to-surface tactical missile is added to the inventory.

Reflecting the reduction in wings and increasing emphasis on missiles, the operating aircraft inventory of the Air Force at the end of 1959 will be about 2,250 less than at the end of 1955.

TRANSFER AUTHORITY—This budget also includes a general provision which will authorize the President to transfer, between appropriations available for obligation for military functions of the Department of Defense, up to $2 billion. This transfer provision is desirable in order to be able to modify and accelerate programs on short notice if new discoveries and developments indicate shifts are desirable from already programed items to other weapons that show a demonstrated superiority.

The budget proposed for 1959 will thus provide for numerically smaller but more powerful and better equipped military forces, with particular emphasis on the development and production of ballistic missiles, ballistic missile submarines, ballistic missile detection and defense, the further dispersal of the retaliatory forces and the improvement of their status, modernization of the early warning system, outer space projects and basic research.

GENERAL THOMAS D. WHITE, Chief of Staff, U.S. Air Force, becomes the first member of the Airpower Book Club. Here he presents his membership check to Mr. Peter J. Schenk, President of the Air Force Association—Club sponsors—and receives the "bonus" book for joining, a copy of "A History of the United States Air Force, 1907-1957."

 Ejecting himself from a burning plane last 10 April after all other attempts had failed to free him from the craft, he was able to crawl free of the flames and was carried to safety by rescuers. He is now back on flying status after undergoing several operations for injuries received in the fall.

Sidewinder Tests Shift From Florida To Alaska

Cold-weather testing of the GAR-8 Sidewinder missile with the F-100D Super Sabre has begun at Eielson AFB, Alaska. This follows an initial series of tests at Eglin AFB, Fla.

The Sidewinder, a Navy-developed infrared guided missile, has been designed to operate against high performance aircraft. It seeks out its target through perception of the invisible infrared radiation. It is fully maneuverable at all speeds and altitudes.

Senior Project Officer for the test is Maj. J. M. Simmons, who will be assisted by Captains James M. Myers, Alonzo J. Walter and Mr. James E. Nickless, Field Technical Representative of North American Aviation, Inc. Capt. Frederick O. Russell is in charge of Logistics, CWO Walter W. Schrieber of Supply, T/Sgt. George A. Grand Central Rocket Sets Altitude Record in "Operation Far Side"

The Air Force has confirmed that it recently fired a rocket to a height of more than 4,000 miles above the earth's surface. The 1900-lb. research vehicle with its 3½-lb. instrument package was launched from a balloon-supported platform, 20 miles above Eniwetok atoll in the Pacific.

Ten solid propellant rocket engines powered the multi-stage missile on its mission into outer space at a velocity in excess of 17,000 mph. The third stage consisted of a cluster of four Grand Central ARROW II rocket engines, and the fourth and final stage of a single ARROW II.

Because of demonstrated performance and reliability, Grand Central Rocket Co.'s ARROWS were selected by Aeronutronic Systems, Inc., a subsidiary of the Ford Motor Co., to play this prominent role in the Far Side Vehicle.

Give and Take. The American people must realize that the 1959 budget for the Armed Services is not the great strengthening of National Defense it appears to be on the surface. Substantial increases have been given for the development of missiles and other new weapons as well as for needed and vital research. But it was done by making big slashes in our existing defense forces.

The Air Force, for example, drops to 105 wings—22 less than last June's total. The Army loses still another division, falling back to 14. The Navy will operate with 103 less ships in its active fleet. Total military manpower takes another slash, going down to 2,525,000, as compared with 2,700,000 last June and a planned 2,608,000 strength by June 1959.

The boost in missile funds is critically needed and must be made if we are not to lose more ground to Russia. But it certainly seems folly to reduce our forces in being because we expect to get more powerful weapons later.

A Good Start. With the submission to Congress 14 January of the Department of Defense's pay plan, a first major step has been taken toward the correction of the Armed Services' antiquated pay structure.

The plan the Department has submitted is not the Cordiner Plan. The Cordiner Report was the starting point, but the version the Department has come up with is the best that could be wheedled from a reluctant Bureau of the Budget. It has the enthusiastic backing of Secretary of Defense Neil H. McElroy.

One important principle of the Cordiner Report has been omitted from the new version. This is the denial of any relief whatsoever to those now on the retired list. This is a violation of precedent, it is unfair treatment of those who are sorely in need of cost of living increases, it will have an adverse effect upon active duty personnel who will fear that they, too, will be forgotten after they have retired.

The best part of the current move is that it brings the measure officially before Congress and opens the way for full scale consideration of the entire problem. For one thing, it will give Mr. Ralph J. Cordiner, chairman of the pay study group, an opportunity to analyze for the Committees of Congress both his report and the Department's bill. Judging from his past statements that piecemeal legislation would not be effective, his testimony should be strong and illuminating.

Despite its weaknesses, the Department's bill is a distinct victory over the forces, including those in the Administration, who wanted the whole idea to die. With public sentiment turning toward a stronger national defense, Secretary McElroy has successfully negotiated through the Bureau of the Budget a measure which, even though it falls short of the Cordiner ideal, is a real step forward and could lead the way to something even better.

Filtered Testimony. It is unfortunate for the military services that the important testimony of many of their top officers is reaching the public at second hand. In the case of the Senate Preparedness Subcommittee much of the testimony is in executive session. At the close of each meeting Chairman Lyndon Johnson issues a prepared statement to the press giving his version of what the witness said. Some days later, after the actual stenographic transcript has been edited by the Department of Defense to delete classified matter, the screened testimony is released. But it is Senator Johnson's on-the-spot statement that hits the headlines; the transcript only comes as an anti-climax.

Intercountry Adoptions

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

May I express my personal thanks, and that of our entire staff, for the excellent article on "Intercountry Adoption" published in your January 4th issue.

During the past several years we have been glad to be of assistance to many hundreds of service families adopting children from other countries. There have also continued to be some situations in which both children and their new adoptive families have encountered serious problems because they did not understand all the issues involved. Publishing an article like this, through your excellent JOURNAL, will help to acquaint others with some of the general information.

We are not exactly looking for new business, as the present volume has almost completely swamped our facilities, but if any experience of ours can be useful we want to make it as widely available as possible. Your article has made a distinct contribution toward this end.

Speaks Up On Pay

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

It seems to me that the situation has become so serious with respect to the loss of trained and qualified men that every advantage to speak up must be taken by all of us who appreciate the situation. This is particularly so where such speaking may have more than a casual influence or, to put it another way, where it will get good supporting news coverage by influential mediums.

I am disturbed by the recent seemingly well-founded reports from Washington as to the way in which the Cordiner recommendations are being whittled away at by the civilian elements in the Pentagon, the Budget Bureau, and other influential areas in Washington. Unless public opinion is aroused, and that can come only by THE JOURNAL's influence on the nation's press, I can see little prospect of satisfactory legislation.

With all of the recent Russian evidence indicating our need of highly trained military personnel, I cannot see why we want to have less competent personnel at higher cost to the United States. It resolves into the simple question—"Do we want a Better Military posture at less cost?"

To me, the solution of this problem is of equal importance to our survival as our handling of highly scientific and technical military developments, such as, guided missiles.

I hope you will make the solution of these two problems your major goal for the coming months.

Ever Been Stationed at Randolph?

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

Personal experiences, anecdotes, or unusual facts and stories, whether old or new, dealing with Randolph Air Force Base are requested for inclusion in a study on Randolph.

Randolph Field was dedicated on 20 June 1930, and celebrated its silver anniversary in 1955. Perhaps some of your readers have been stationed there as an instructor, cadet, student officer, member of the house-keeping units, or trainee in any of the schools and remember an interesting, unusual, or noteworthy event or experience. If so, their assistance in making these facts available will be appreciated.

the impression that the 50-year-old three-star officer was asking for retirement because he was not getting immediate promotion to four stars and an assignment he wanted. Later, when testimony was released, it appeared that General Gavin's motivation was on a higher plane—that he felt his position was untenable and he did not want to have to defend a budget in which he did not believe. In fact, he said promotion difficulties had nothing to do with his decision to retire.

We would suggest that the Department assign a team of security officers to the committee, as it has done on other occasions, so that such testimony could be cleared and released at once. Failing that, we would urge the public to withhold judgment on military witnesses until their verbatim testimony is released to the press.

QUOTES FROM THE JOURNAL

10 Year Ago (17 Jan. 1948)—A grim and foreboding picture of the war of the future, with long-range guided missiles and biological warfare added to the atomic bomb, is painted in the report of the President's Air Policy Commission released this week under the ominous title "Survival in the Air Age." To preserve our Nation under such conditions, the Commission... bluntly admits would be a costly program, estimating that by 1952 it would require an annual expenditure of $18 billions for the maintenance of the Army, Navy, and Air Force as opposed to the slightly more than $10 billion appropriated for the current year.

50 Years Ago (18 Jan. 1908)—The horsemanship policy of the President may be said to be creeping into every phase of Army administration. Not only are cadets at the Military Academy to be tested out for the Cavalry, but every enlisted man and civilian designated for examination for a commission as a second lieutenant must go through a like ordeal.

90 Years Ago (18 Jan. 1868)—The act of committing to the hands of Army officers the military governance of the South was a precipitation of them into the maelstrom of politics: many who entered in, at the command, have come out with the marks of rude buffeting on them, and the rest are still tossed, struggling, in the whirls and eddies.

President Eisenhower Tells Fiscal '59 Budget Approach; Forces Reduced, But Striking Power Growth Stressed

AMERICANS are determined to maintain our ability to deter war and to repel and decisively counter any possible attack.

Today we possess military superiority over any potential aggressor or aggressors. Every American should clearly understand that the vast defense programs undertaken during the past several years have greatly advanced our military preparedness and developed and harnessed impressive new scientific achievements.

We have sharply increased the numbers of scientists and engineers assigned to top priority defense programs. We have expanded many fold the expenditures for the development of missiles, both defensive and counteroffensive. We have accelerated development of advanced guidance systems, new fuels, and heat-resistant materials. We have greatly enlarged our network of warning devices and communications.

Striking Result

Our longer-range ballistic missile development, in particular, has long had the highest national priority. The result is striking. Whereas in 1953 we spent only $1 million on these programs, we spent $1 billion in 1957 and will spend more in 1958 and still more in 1959.

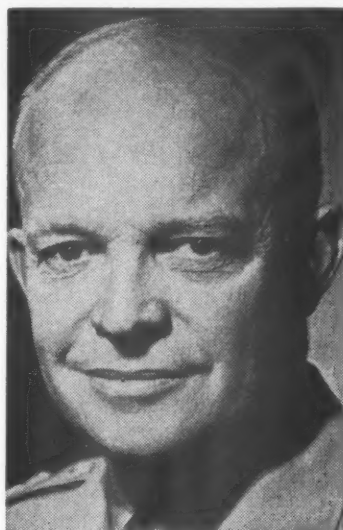

Our defenses are strong today, both as a deterrent to war and for use as a crushing response to any attack. Now our concern is for the future. Certain elements of our defense program have reached the point where they can be further accelerated. I will transmit to the Congress, immediately, a supplemental appropriation request of $1.3 billion for the Department of Defense for the fiscal year 1958. Further increases in new obligational authority are requested for the fiscal year 1959. The recommended authority for the military functions of the Department of Defense is $39.1 billion, which is $0.6 billion more than was requested in last year's budget for 1958 and $3.8 billion more than the amount the Congress has thus far enacted for 1958. Spending for military functions of the Department of Defense in 1959 is estimated to total $39.8 billion.

$5.3 Billion For Missiles

The development of longer-range ballistic missiles, construction of missile sites and detection systems, and other missile programs including guided missile ships will be substantially augmented. The total expenditures for missile research, development and procurement, for guided missile ships, and for missile-related construction will be $4.3 billion in 1958 and $5.3 billion in 1959, compared with $3 billion spent in 1957, $1.7 billion in 1956, and $1.2 billion in 1955. Commencing in 1958, we will procure a number of new missiles which have been recently developed and have now become operational.

As an indispensable part of our efforts to maintain an adequate defense, the budget recommendations for 1959 call for continued contributions to the efforts of free world nations to promote the collective defense and economic growth. The Soviet threat to freedom is far more than military power alone. Poverty and ignorance, and the despair, fear, and unrest that flow from them, have always been enemies to liberty. The Communists well know this and unceasingly exploit these factors to extend their influence and control. This Soviet economic assault on freedom is rapidly growing. Conquest by this route is no less menacing to us and other free nations than conquest by military force. We must, accordingly, vigorously advance our programs to assist other peoples in their efforts to remove poverty and ignorance. As we succeed in these military and economic efforts, our own freedom and security are strengthened, and the prospects for peace are improved.

Expand Research

Scientific and research efforts throughout the Nation must be expanded. This is a task not only for the Government but also for private industry, foundations, and educational institutions. The Government, on its part, will increase its efforts in this area. Supplemental appropriations for 1958 will be requested for the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics and the National Science Foundation, as well as the Department of Defense. For 1959, new programs to promote education in science are being recommended and basic research activities are being generally expanded.

Changes in emphasis.—Total Government expenditures (1) for all procurement to equip our forces and those of our allies with weapons, ships, planes, and missiles, (2) for atomic energy, and (3) for all scientific research and education will be approximately $21.1 billion in 1958 and $21.6 billion in 1959, compared with $20.5 billion in 1957.

Within these totals for procurement and science, we have gradually but substantially changed our emphasis. This administration's continuing attention in recent years to new concepts of defense is shown by the fact that more than 75% of the total funds for procurement in the 1959 budget and 1958 supplemental requests is programmed for new types of equipment which had not been developed in the fiscal year 1955 or were not being bought in production quantities in that year—the first full year following the Korean conflict. In 1953, missiles alone took less than 2 cents of each dollar spent for major procurement; in 1957, missiles took about 15 cents of every procurement dollar; and in 1959 will take about 24 cents.

The greatly increased firepower of modern weapons and the continuing increase in efficiency permit a further reduction in the numbers of military personnel. Procurement of older types of weapons and equipment is also being reduced. Other defense expenditures will be reduced by closing installations that are outmoded or are of limited use, and by tightening maintenance standards, procurement practices, and supply management.

DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE, MILITARY FUNCTION.—To accelerate the adaptation of our defenses to changing

The Defense Department 14 January released official statistics which showed that the Armed Forces decreased 40,867 men and women from 31 October to 30 November.

At the beginning of December, the breakdown was as follows:

Army—835,869.
Navy—639,185.
Air Force—889,800.

Civil Works For '59 Set At $627.6 Million

The President's budget message to Congress asks $627,670,000 for the Civil Works Program of the Corps of Engineers in fiscal year 1959.

This compares with actual appropriations of $638,293,100 for fiscal year 1958.

In the "Construction General" program for fiscal year 1959, funds are requested for 164 continuing projects. Funds are also requested for 33 planning projects.

memo

CONGRESS WILL RESIST the President's request for $2 billion transfer authority. There is wide recognition that the Chief Executive and the Secretary of Defense should be able in event of an emergency or major breakthrough to transfer funds from one activity to another, but legislators will be concerned that a $2 billion leeway could reduce substantially their Constitutional responsibility for "raising and equipping" military forces. The point will be made that the Secretary has millions of dollars in an Emergency Fund for use as he sees fit.

THE ADMINISTRATION HAS FORFEITED any chance to use force level and manpower cuts in future discussions that may take place with the Soviets on reduced armaments by announcing division, wing and ship reductions 18 months in advance. Seemingly, the fiscal '59 budget could have projected continuation of present levels. Then, for whatever reasons, the cuts could have been implemented at a later time.

THE MUTABILITY OF FORCE LEVELS projected in January budgets is evident in the fact that the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marines all have been reduced from the strength goals presented to Congress in early '57 for the year starting 1 July.

MISSILE DESTROYERS are being heralded by Navy men as capable of playing a vital role in the anti-missile effort. Cdr. C. F. Helme, who is captain of the USS Gyatt, the Navy's first guided missile destroyer, says the vessel "has great possibilities in detecting targets even smaller than jet aircraft." The missile ship skipper adds: "I would even say that with further improvements this system could launch the long sought for Anti-Missile Missile."

BOOST LAUNCHING OF MISSILES soon may become a reality. The General Electric Co. has proposed to the Air Force a plan for shooting missiles from space launchers. The system provides for a missile and the platform to be rocketed to a high altitude from which the missile would be fired, and the launcher recovered.

THE NATIONAL ADVISORY COMMITTEE for Aeronautics, under Lt. Gen. James H. Doolittle, USAF-Ret., figures to receive a substantial increase in funds that will help speed "upstream" projects. President Eisenhower has asked Congress for an increase in the NACA appropriations. Perhaps equally important is the fact that SecDef McElroy undoubtedly will divert millions of dollars from the new Advanced Research Projects Agency to NACA laboratories.

THE AIR FORCE SAYS that every base operations office must contain an accurate master clock "which can be read to the nearest second." An official regulation (AFR 55-17) adds: "If the master clock is more than three minutes off, it should be reset to the exact time."

FOR SECDEF WILSON CAN BE BITTER about the Budget Bureau's action last Spring which forced the Pentagon chief to deep freeze recommendations made by the Cordiner Committee, which he had appointed. The Budget Bureau called the proposals "inflationary" in rejecting Mr. Wilson's "urgent" request for legislation "as soon as possible." This put the Secretary in the position of backing away from proposals (1) that were presented to him by a group of which he thought highly; and (2) that he himself thought highly important to national security.

WHY DID THE BUDGET BUREAU change its position?

The Services can give a lion's share of the credit to the tireless efforts of President Ralph J. Cordiner of the General Electric Company. He carried his case to Congress and to the nation's leading editors to win widespread support for a new pay structure. Also an important factor was the work done by a Pentagon task force, named by Secretary Wilson, to follow up on the Cordiner Committee study. That task force was ready with up-to-the-minute data for SecDef McElroy, who in turn was able to convince the President of what the Chief Executive previously had supported: namely the need to abandon "Methuselah" pay concepts in favor of a modern "pay for merit" approach.

STARTING FROM SCRATCH, Secretary McElroy is in position, as he showed in Congressional testimony this week (Page 2) to go all-out on Capitol Hill in fighting for the principles proposed by Mr. Cordiner and endorsed by Mr. Wilson, until the Budget Bureau advised him he would have to back off from plans for Congressional action in '57.

THE ARMY WILL HOPE that Washington follows up the procedure which saw Lt. Gen. Arthur G. Trudeau, I Corps Commander in Korea, designated this week to succeed Lt. Gen. James M. Gavin, who retires, as Chief of Research and Development on 1 April. The Army frequently has delayed announcement of such key assignment changes. This has damaged the prestige of important posts.

THE NAVY AND AIR FORCE make it a point in almost all cases to announce flag and general officer changes, with specific assignments, several months or more in advance of the actual shifts. This helps assure Senate confirmations, where necessary, and preserves the prestige of billets that are involved.

IT WAS TYPICAL that the Army should announce Maj. Gen. Thomas L. Sherburne, jr., who activated the pioneer Pentomic division, the 101st Airborne at Ft. Campbell, Ky., in September 1956, is going to Europe this Spring, but not to give his new assignment, nor name his successor. A good guess for the 101st post is Maj. Gen. William C. Westmoreland, Secretary of the General Staff.

IT IS PARTICULARLY IMPORTANT that the Army be especially concerned with the early announcement of general officer shifts, since a number of top echelon changes are in the offing. Lt. Gen. Thomas F. Hickey, Third Army Commander, is slated to retire 30 April at Ft. McPherson, Ga., and General Willard G. Wyman, CONARC Chief at Ft. Monroe, Va., has been extended from retirement only from 31 March to 31 July.

LT. GEN. BRUCE CLARKE, Seventh Army Commander in Europe, is headed for the four-star CONARC post, unless there is a decision to hold him in Europe for the four-star USAREUR CinC billet which opens up in March 1959 with retirement of General Henry I. Hodes.

A LEADING PROSPECT for the Seventh Army or USAREUR post is Lt. Gen. Clyde D. Eddleman, Deputy Chief of Staff for Operations. Another who could be moved is Lt. Gen. Blackshear M. Bryan, but a drawback is the fact that he was shifted only last year to command the First Army at Governors Island, N. Y., as a result of the command changes in the Pacific, where he had been USARPAC Commander for only a short time.

Capt. Bowman Honored For 3 Copter Records

Capt. James E. Bowman, USA, of the Army Aviation Board, Ft. Rucker, Ala., has received the Distinguished Flying Cross for setting three world helicopter records in a Cessna YH-41 Seneca, 28 December.

Presentation was made by Secretary of the Army Wilber Brucker at a special Pentagon ceremony. The Secretary noted Captain Bowman's "extraordinary achievement" and "superb abilities as a pilot."

Breaking previous marks by more than 3,000 feet, Captain Bowman set a new altitude record of 30,335 feet for both the unlimited and 1,102-to-2,204-pound weight categories. Soaring to 28,200 feet, he set a third record in the 2,204-3,856-pound class.

Changes Sought In Navy-Marine Promotions

porarily promote them to the next higher grade" at the end of 18 months. Authority to make promotions at the end of 18 months is temporary, and can be used only in time of war or national emergency. The present national emergency, which began with the Korean war, currently permits such promotions.

Change Pay Entitlement

Navy-Marine Corps legislation, now before the Congress, provides permanent authority for such temporary promotions "on completion of the period of service prescribed by the Secretary." This could mean more or less service than the present 18-months' requirement, but a Navy spokesman said there is no current plan to deviate from the 18-month pattern.

In addition, the legislation provides that officers so promoted would be entitled to the pay and allowances of the higher grade from the day following the date on which they completed the prescribed period of service. That is, if an ensign completed 18 months' service on 4 February 1958 and was temporarily promoted to lieutenant (jg) at a later date, his pay in the new grade would date back to 5 February 1958.

The present, temporary law authorizes the pay of the new rank only from the date of acceptance of the appointment. All appointments under the new proposal would be made by the President but would not require the advice or consent of the Senate.

Throw Out Refund

From 1 September 1954 to 15 February 1955, approximately 2700 Marine Corps second lieutenants were promoted under section 302(d) of the Officer Personnel Act and paid the pay and allowances of the higher grade from the day following the date on which they completed 18 months' service. The Comptroller General later ruled that these officers were entitled to their new pay and allowances only from the date of acceptance of their appointments as first lieutenants.

The new proposal would make it unnecessary for these officers to refund the "overpayments" to the Government.

From 15 February 1955 to 1 January 1958, approximately 3,687 Marine Corps second lieutenants were temporarily promoted to first lieutenant and paid the pay and allowances of the higher grade from the date of acceptance of their appointments. The new proposal would authorize this group, and any others promoted before the effective date of the new law, to receive the pay and allowances of the higher grade from the day following the date on which they completed the service prescribed for promotion.

The Navy said the plan will not increase budget requirements.

120 Marines Will Lose Jobs; "Skyknight" Phases Out

The last Douglas F3D "Skyknight" jet fighter will be phased out of the Marine Corps this year and temporarily put 120 enlisted Airborne Intercept Operators out of jobs.

Since present Marine Aviation pro-urement programs will eliminate the need for men with Military Occupational Specialty No. 6731, the Corps has set up a program which will retrain AIO's in Mo's closely allied with their previous experience.

Two Army Wives Conduct Radio Program
Directed to Service Families in D. C. Area

Military families in the Washington, D. C., area have a radio program directed especially to them.

The daily broadcasts over Station WFAX (1220 on Washington dials) is the brainchild of two Army wives, Mrs. Rosanne McQuarrie and Mrs. Pat Gates. Their aim is to show the service wife as a world neighbor and point out her contribution to community service, the arts and business world.

The "U. S. Lady On The Air," as the program is called, is directed at the more than 50,000 service families in the Washington area. Besides its function of informing and entertaining, it is designed to encourage understanding among members of each of the Services. The program has no connection with any individual firm or organization.

To date the program has been so successful that Station WFAX is anxious to enlarge its 15-minute format to a full half-hour show. Local television stations have also expressed interest in presenting the program.

In pursuing their policy of presenting the "good, all-around service wife" to the radio audience, the two Army ladies of the airways daily interview a different military wife, and many times include military men of special interest to their listeners.

Thus far the wives interviewed on the program have come from all the services. Their husbands ranged in rank from sergeant to Lieutenant general.

Mrs. America of 1958, Mrs. Harry Finley, also took the program spotlight for one day. She is the wife of an Air Force lieutenant colonel.

Each week, the U. S. Lady program slates a special treat for one service wife in the National Capital area. She is interviewed on the program, treated to dinner at a Washington restaurant. The lucky lady is also decorated with an orchid corsage for the occasion.

The program's two originators lead a hectic schedule. Besides planning and executing the show by themselves, each has a home, husband and children to care for.

Mrs. Gates' husband, Lt. Col. Mahlon E. Gates, is Military Assistant to the Director of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. They have two children, Pamela, 11, and Lawrence, age 7.

Maj. Claude M. McQuarrie, jr., is now assigned to the Army Office of Legislative Liaison. He and Mrs. McQuarrie have three children: Sandra, 10; Claude M. III, age 7; and Leslie Jo, age 2.

Between them, these two Army wives have many years of acting and theatrical experience, both before and during their Army life. When asked about future radio or television possibilities, they admit "We just don't know."

Fifth MarDiv Assn.
Expands College Fund

Children of Marines disabled while serving with the Fifth Division are eligible for college financial assistance under a revision of the 5th Marine Division Association's scholarship program.

In the past, the program was open only to children of Marines killed during WWII.

Under the new provisions, the applicant's father must be incapacitated at least 80 per cent. Eligibility also hinges on the need of the family.

Grants will be limited to $300 a year for a maximum of four years.

Applications should be sent to the Secretary-Treasurer, 5th Marine Division Association, Headquarters Marine Corps, Washington 25, D. C.

President Describes Fighting Forces Changes In Fiscal '59 Budget

conditions, a request for supplemental appropriations of $1.3 billion for the Department of Defense in the fiscal year 1958 is being transmitted to the Congress. The result will be to increase total new obligational authority for 1958 for the military functions of the Department of Defense to $36.6 billion. A further increase of $2.5 billion is recommended for the fiscal year 1959, bringing the total for that year to $39.1 billion.

It is essential that we be able promptly to modify and accelerate programs when and as important discoveries or technological developments in weapons indicate such action to be desirable. To accomplish this end, the budget includes a contingency reserve of $500 million for defense purposes only. It also proposes that the Congress authorize the President to transfer up to $2 billion between appropriations available for military functions of the Department of Defense. This transfer authority is important and I will not hesitate to use it.

I have already discussed the urgent problem of reorganization of the Department of Defense in the State of the Union message. In the interest of the taxpayer, improved operating and fiscal controls must accompany larger appropriations.

Expenditures in 1958 are now estimated to be $38.9 billion compared with the original 1958 budget estimate of $38 billion. Estimated expenditures for 1959 are $39.8 billion, an increase of $0.9 billion over the current estimate for 1958, $1.3 billion higher than in 1957, and $4 billion more than in 1956.

These increased appropriations and expenditures are necessary for a speed-up in the adjustment of military strategy, forces, techniques, and organization to keep pace with the rapid strides in science and technology. Since the end of the Korean conflict, new weapons systems of vastly increased combat effectiveness have been provided for our military forces, while numbers of military units and personnel have been gradually reduced. We can expect new developments at an ever-increasing pace.

The rapidly changing character of the military program is strikingly evident when the weapons and equipment we propose to buy in 1959 are compared with those bought as recently as 1955—the first full fiscal year after the Korean conflict.

There is hardly a production model aircraft on the Air Force's Proposed list for procurement with 1959 funds that was included in its 1955 program. All the fighters and bombers proposed for procurement with 1959 appropriations will be capable of supersonic speeds and of using guided missiles and nuclear weapons. Of the $1.5 billion of aircraft, engines, and aeronautical equipment proposed to be bought by the Navy in 1959, about 80% will be for models which had not reached the point of being bought in production quantities in 1955.

Even in the new field of missile technology, there will be a very marked shift of emphasis from the earlier, initial weapons systems to the much more advanced systems of the future. The longer range ballistic missiles—Atlas, Titan, Thor, Jupiter, Polaris—only one of which was beyond the technical study stage 2½ years ago, will account for nearly half of the missile program for 1959. For the total missile program, about 90% of the dollars planned for procurement in 1959 are for weapons which were not in production in operational quantities in 1955.

Most of the ships in the proposed 1959 construction program are entirely new types not to be found in the 1955 shipbuilding list. These include guided missile destroyers and the first nuclear-powered frigate. The first three ballistic missile submarines for the fleet are included in the 1958 supplemental request.

Fully half of the proposed 1959 program of military construction is for facilities for the Strategic Air Command and for weapons systems and equipment which will have been brought into operational use since 1955.

Research and the operation of facilities for research, development, and testing of missiles will take a much greater proportion of the research and development budget in 1959 than in 1955. In the 4 fiscal years 1956-59, roughly $20 billion of research and development, procurement, military personnel, and construction funds will have been programmed for the research, development, test, and evaluation of new weapons systems to bring them to operational status.

PROGRAMS REQUIRING GREATER EMPHASIS—The budget provides funds for a still greater expansion of the swiftly progressing intercontinental and intermediate range ballistic missile programs. The Jupiter and Thor intermediate range ballistic missiles are being placed in production. Work on the Atlas intercontinental ballistic missile will be accelerated.

Funds are also provided to speed up the operational availability of the Polaris intermediate range ballistic missile and the first three submarines designed to employ this weapon.

Expansion and further improvement of the continental defense early warning network will be undertaken and construction of a new ballistic missile detection system started, including the necessary facilities for communication with the North American Defense Command and the Strategic Air Command.

This budget includes funds for accelerating the dispersal of Strategic Air Command aircraft to additional bases and for the construction of "alert" facilities. The readiness of these retaliatory forces must be measured in minutes. Not only must planes be kept constantly in the air, but also additional combat air crews must be able to take off almost instantly upon receipt of warning of an impending enemy attack. Takeoff time will be appreciably shortened by constructing additional runways, fueling stations, and quarters for the crews at the runway. Within the total appropriations for the fiscal years will be increased to counter potential enemy submarine threats.

While greater attention is given in this budget to the foregoing areas, conventional warfare capabilities of all the military services are also being improved. For example, funds are provided to initiate production of new models of small arms and ammunition, standardized for use by all members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

MILITARY AND CIVILIAN PAY—

With the development of new weapons systems, the technical proficiency demanded of military personnel has increased tremendously. Personnel trained at great expense in the operation and maintenance of these modern weapons must have greater incentives to remain in service. For present and long-range efficiency and for greater equity, the military pay system must be recast. Minimizing the present large turnover in military personnel will reduce the percentage of men in training and add to the percentage of men assigned to combat missions.

The funds provided in this budget for military personnel are based on achieving these objectives and on making the changes in pay rates effective on July 1, 1958. The funds for the Department of Defense also include an allowance to cover its share of the cost of the revision in the pay structure for classified civilian employees recommended in the general government section of this message.

The revisions proposed are an adaptation of the principles recommended by the Advisory Committee on Professional and Technical Compensation in its report of May 8, 1957. The principles for military pay call for rewarding proficiency and merit and for stimulating career motivation. Attainment of these desirable goals requires elimination of the current longevity system in which a man of lower rank can receive more pay than one of higher rank, and the substitution of a system which would: (1) add two pay grades for both officers and enlisted personnel; (2) widen the pay differentials between grades by means of substantial increases for the senior officer and senior enlisted grades; and (3) establish uniform entering pay rates for each grade.

U. S. COAST GUARD

Secretary of the Treasury—Robert B. Anderson
Commandant—Vice Adm. Alfred C. Richmond

PRESIDENT Eisenhower's Fiscal Year 1959 budget drastically slashes the amount the Coast Guard will be permitted to spend on modernization but provides funds for maintaining approximately the same manpower levels as this year. The total budget request is for $227 million.

This Fiscal Year, the Coast Guard was authorized expenditures of $21 million under the Acquisition, Construction, and Improvements section of its budget. This figure has been knocked down to $1,672,000—a reduction of $19.3 million.

Slightly more—nearly $500 thousand—will be permitted to be spent under the Operating Expenses section, while the Retired Pay section increases $1.4 million—from about $26.3 million to $27.8 million.

The Reserve Training section of the budget remains the same—$11.5 million. It is estimated that the Coast Guard will end Fiscal Year 1959 with 158 fewer officers and men than will be on duty at the end of FY '58. The number is expected to drop from 26,291 to 26,133.

In addition, there is included $13.9 million for payment of 3,653 civilian employees.

A highlight of the Operating Section of the proposed budget is inclusion of funds for addition of 1,225 unmanned aids to navigation which will be installed in 1959.

New Patrol Craft

The budget provides funds for modernization of one buoy tender, construction of patrol boats to replace the least serviceable of 53 83-foot wooden hulled craft constructed during WWII, and development of a design which will be used to replace more of the old patrol vessels in succeeding years.

In the aviation area, the budget provides for procurement of two C-130 Lockheed turbo-props to replace two over-age PB1G's and two modern helicopters to replace over-age models.

Provision is made for establishment of aids to navigation in waterways which have been improved by the Army Corps of Engineers and for installation and replacement of other aids made necessary by the natural shifting of channels and the changing needs of marine commerce.

The budget request asks for money for modernization of freight elevators at two bases and repairs to a causeway at one base; construction of barracks at one base, and construction of an electric power substation at the Coast Guard Yard, Curtis Bay, Md.

At the same time, the Defense Department plans to spend money for 12 loran stations and support facilities which will be operated by the Coast Guard.

Reserve Training

During 1959, the number of Reservists receiving training under the 6-month program at the Alameda Base will be increased from 500 to 750. In addition, 27 Organized Reserve training units will be placed in operation.

To meet the increased input, the Alameda Base will undergo renovation.

Early Action Looms For Service Pay

From first page—

mittee that no second lieutenant should receive more pay because he reached that rank through one avenue—say OCS—than another second lieutenant who was commissioned from a Service Academy or ROTC program.

Pentagon officials, recalling the history of military pay legislation, anticipate that changes will be made on Capitol Hill.

It can be taken for granted that if the House and Senate propose to include retired persons in the new pay benefits—a 6 per cent increase for retired would cost about $41,000,000—the Defense Department happily will agree.

The fact of the matter is that Secretary McElroy asked that retired persons be given a pay raise, but he was turned down by the Budget Bureau, obviously because retired civilian employees are not included in pay raise legislation.

The consensus at the Pentagon late this week was that chances of a pay raise in time for the 1 July target date are at least 50-50, although it was recognized that the $518,000,000 pricetag may be reduced before the bill clears the House and Senate.

Obituary

Maj. Gen. William H. Maglin, USA-Ret.

Funeral services were held at the Ft. Myer, Va. Chapel 15 January for Maj. Gen. William H. Maglin, USA-Ret, who died of a heart attack at his home at Melbourne Shores, Fla., 11 January, at the age of 59. Burial was at Arlington National Cemetery.

Born in The Bronx, N. Y., General Maglin, as an 18-year-old youth in 1917, enlisted in the Army a few hours after the U. S. had declared war, and rose to the rank of corporal. After standing competitive examinations, he entered the U. S. Military Academy, from which he was graduated in 1924. A graduate of the Infantry School and the Command and General Staff College, General Maglin served as Provost Marshal at the U. S. Military Academy in 1940-41, when he was assigned to the Office of the Provost Marshal General in Washington. In June 1942, he became Deputy Provost Marshal of Services and Supply in the European theater and later, Deputy Provost Marshal of the North African theater. In 1943, General Maglin was assigned as Commandant of the Provost Marshal School. In 1945, after serving as Director of the Military Police Division of the Office of the Provost Marshal General in Washington, he was appointed Assistant Director and later, Director of the Department of Police, U. S. Army Military Government in Korea.

Upon his return to the U. S., General Maglin was made Commandant of the Military Police School in 1947, in which position he served until he was appointed Deputy Provost Marshal General in 1950. The following year, he was transferred to Germany as Provost Marshal of the European Command and the next year, was designated Provost Marshal of the newly-organized U. S. Army, Europe. Named Provost Marshal General of the Army in February 1953, General Maglin served in that capacity until his retirement from active duty, only last September.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Kathryn Swint Maglin of Melbourne Shores; two sons, Capt. William C. Maglin, now in Honolulu, and Mr. Jere P. Maglin of Chevy Chase, Md.; three grandchildren; and one sister, Mrs. Grace Sheridan, and one brother, Mr. Herbert J. Maglin, both of Long Island.

President's Comments On '59 Budget

scribed above will be costly. Beyond the reduction of $1.5 billion for procurement of aircraft and conventional weapons from 1957 to 1959, it is necessary that every possible economy be effected in other defense activities to help offset the increased costs of the high priority programs. This means, among other things, that we must eliminate programs and facilities no longer needed and make sure that we have no needless duplication.

All forces, units, and activities are being reexamined to determine whether or not they will still be needed as modern weapons, improved techniques, and new organizations come into being. Any activity of the services not making an essential contribution to a military mission must be eliminated.

As with our active-duty forces, the size, mission, and organizational structure of our reserve components must be shaped to meet the requirements of modern warfare. They must be designed to augment the active-duty forces quickly and efficiently. Our reserve personnel programs will give greater emphasis to quality and readiness than to quantity.

The Department of Defense is now operating a very large number of installations and bases in the continental United States and overseas. Some of these installations involve use of costly or extensive facilities for activities that could be performed more economically at other locations. As the Department of Defense continues to adopt modern weapons and revised organizations, some of these stations will become unnecessary. On the other hand, dispersal of the retaliatory forces will require some additional bases and increased costs. Closing down and disposing of installations not definitely required for the combat forces or for their supply and distribution systems will help make funds available to support the new stations. Keeping nonessential installations in operation, thereby diverting personnel and funds from our true defense requirements at the expense of our combat capabilities, poorly serves our defenses and the general public.

All facilities and activities which are retained will be continually evaluated to prevent extravagance and wastefulness in operation and maintenance. The Department of Defense, in collaboration with Treasury, Bureau of the Budget, and General Accounting Office, is also engaged in improving financial management in the operation and maintenance activities and other areas.

The supply and distribution activities of the armed services must also be further streamlined. The Department of Defense is now making a comprehensive review of procurement practices and inventory management. Emphasis is being placed upon techniques for coordinating defense supply systems so that they will be oriented to support adequately the increasing numbers of new weapons and avoid oversupply for older weapons.

In the interest of holding procurement costs to a minimum, I recommend that the Renegotiation Act be extended.

Pentagon Asks $600 Million For Retired

THE Defense Department estimates that 223,680 military personnel will be on the retired rolls during the fiscal year starting 1 July—about 15,000 more than this year.

The President's budget seeks $600,000,000 for retired military pay. No funds were asked for a retired pay increase.

The following tabulation shows the average number of retired personnel on the rolls during fiscal year 1957, compared with fiscal '58 and '59 estimates.

Chairman Vinson Begins Full-Scale Study Of Armed Forces; Sees Legislation Ahead

The full House Armed Services Committee resolved itself into an investigating committee 10 January to begin a protracted study of all facets of national defense.

Hearings, which began officially on 13 January with Secretary of Defense Neil H. McElroy and General Nathan F. Twining, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff,

Congress' Record Quotes The Journal

Articles in the 4 January issue of THE JOURNAL on "the lopsided structure of the five-sided house"—a discussion of Pentagon delays and indecision—were inserted in the Congressional Record of 9 January, pages 122-125.

Representative Leon Gavin (R-Pa.), second ranking Republican member of the House Armed Services Committee, who inserted the article, told his colleagues:

"Because of THE JOURNAL's wide influence in the military field, and because of the emphasis which this session of the Congress is expected to place on the military budget and military legislation, I believe the entire House membership will want to read these stories."

Mr. Gavin said THE JOURNAL's articles "clearly indicate the need to overhaul the Defense Department and to improve Service coordination on such matters as pay for enlisted men, better food for our fighting forces, elimination of substandard housing and improved military discipline. They also remind us," the Pennsylvania legislator said, "of shocking delays and disputes in the research and development program."

as the first witnesses, are being conducted behind closed doors.

The first phase of the hearings is confined to missiles, satellites and outer space. This will be followed by a definitive look at all other major aspects of the U. S. defense structure.

Chairman Carl Vinson (D-Ga.) said the second phase will involve an examination of "the adequacy of the budget, our military manpower, its organization into combat and support units, the adequacy of the weapons with which they are armed, and other related matters." It will also include, he said, "the assignment of roles and missions, and the organization and operation of the Joint Chiefs of Staff."

Chairman Vinson

Promises Prompt Action

Chairman Vinson opened the hearings with a statement that the purpose of the investigation is to "fully explore our military situation in its entirety" and then take prompt action in areas which require legislation.

He reminded the 36 members of his committee that they have always "worked together as a team," free of partisan considerations and with the best interests of the nation as their only criterion. This "high sense of dedication" has been demonstrated so many times, he said, "that now it is fully understood by all who have business with the committee."

Welcoming Secretary McElroy in his first appearance before the Committee, Chairman Vinson said he wished it could have been "under less critical circumstances. But, neither you nor we control the circumstances which raise the question of the hour—Where do we stand in military power as against Russia?"

"Squarely Up To You"

Many factors laid the problem on our doorstep, Mr. Vinson said, but there can be no question as to where the responsibility now lies in doing something about it. He told Secretary McElroy, "Within the Executive Branch the question is squarely up to you and the President as a matter of constitutional and legal responsibility. This Committee has a similar responsibility within the Legislative Branch."

The powerful House Chairman said it is "obvious" the Committee "will have responsibility for a number of legislative proposals for the strengthening of our defense."

President Eisenhower, in his State of the Union message, said he is personally studying the need to reorganize the Defense Department and hopes to "present appropriate recommendations" to the Congress "soon."

Wants To Be Sure

Secretary McElroy told the Committee he shares "the President's feeling of urgency" concerning the need to study the Defense Department organization and work out a sound solution. He said he is devoting a good deal of time and thought to the subject.

The Secretary of Defense said "We sometimes forget how enormous the Defense Department operation really is. For example, each of the military departments is bigger than any other department of government. When the country moves to make major changes in the organization of an enterprise as large as this, it wants to be sure that it is right."

He said "Any change, even an improvement, takes time to settle into operating efficiency. So it is essential that the best thinking available on this subject be marshaled and deliberately considered."

In the weeks ahead the House Committee will hear a long list of witnesses on all subjects dealing with the national defense. Chairman Vinson said it is obvious the Committee "must know where we stand" before it can intelligently draft legislation to strengthen the country's military posture.

"Two-Fisted Secretary"

Chairman Richard B. Russell (D-Ga.) of the Senate Armed Services Committee believes a "two-fisted Secretary of Defense" could iron out most major Defense Department problems without resorting to a complete reorganization of the Pentagon.

He told Capitol Hill reporters he has been "favorably impressed" with Secretary of Defense Neil H. McElroy's quick decisions.

Senator Russell said "all you need to get action now is a two-fisted Secretary of Defense who's not afraid to assume responsibility and has the President's support."

INDUSTRY IN DEFENSE

DoD Plan Will Drive Small Industries Out Of Government Business, NSIA Says

Many small industries "would be driven out of Government business" if the Defense Department adopts proposed revisions to the Armed Services Procurement Regulation, the National Security Industrial Association has charged.

NSIA is a non-profit organization comprised of more than 525 companies which supply goods and services to the Armed Forces. The Association was conceived in 1944 by the first Secretary of Defense, James Forrestal, as a means of developing a closer working relationship between the Government and Industry.

Adoption of the proposal, the NSIA said "represents a definite backward step" which would have the effect of "narrowing the military base for procurement."

Dispute Develops

In dispute is a DoD plan to revise Parts 1 and 2 of Section XV of the Armed Services Procurement Regulations. The draft of the proposed revisions has been under close scrutiny by NISA's Contract Finance Task Committee and Procurement Advisory Committee for nearly five months and has been widely distributed among the Association's members.

In a letter to E. Perkins McGuire, Assistant Secretary of Defense (Supply and Logistics), R. N. McFarlane, Association Executive Director, said the draft "has revoked a very strong and unfavorable reaction."

In addition to shutting-out small businesses from doing Government work, he wrote, the draft "would discourage industry participation in the defense program at a time when the greatest degree of industrial participation is needed in the interest of National security."

At the same time, Mr. McFarlane said, the revision "would increase audit and accounting burdens on both the Government and Industry at a time when both are striving to achieve the utmost in economy of operation" and create "a lack of uniformity of treatment among contractors."

"Fallacious and Objectionable"

Specifically, Mr. McFarlane stated, the draft contains the following features which are "fallacious and objectionable."

"It would extend the theory of cost allowances and disallowances to all types of prime contracts and subcontracts, whereas, legally and contractually this theory can be applied only to cost reimbursement type contracts."

"By its terms, the draft dictates the accounting system to be employed by contractors in that it governs the development and submission of price analysis and cost statements and, hence, it precludes from price negotiation any consideration of the costs set forth as allowable in whole or in part.

"It fails to recognize that reasonableness in amount and allocation in accordance with an acceptable accounting system are the proper tests of allowability of cost, and it substitutes instead arbitrary determinations with regard to individual items."

The effect of the draft, NSIA said would be to "change all contracts to a cost-reimbursement nature."

The proposed revision to the regulation provides specific treatment for 45 items of cost, of which 30 are disallowed in whole or in part, or made subject to negotiation, the NSIA Executive Director notes. This approach, he states, fails to give "recognition to all normal and legitimate costs of doing business."

Sees Favoritism

In addition, he said, the draft imposes a requirement that 16 specific elements of cost must be negotiated into each contract to be allowable. Such a requirement, he protests, "favors any company in a strong negotiating position, opens the door to special treatment, and, limits management's discretion to make sound decisions during the course of performance of the contract merely because cost coverage had not previously negotiated."

By setting up a new test of acceptability, Mr. McFarlane told Secretary McGuire, the draft "establishes that companies with a preponderance of Government business are not subject to competitive restraints, and, accordingly, cost of such companies must be scrutinized with great care, and, in many cases, allowed only if specifically negotiated into the contract."

As a result, the draft "would promote a lack of uniformity in treatment among contractors through the disallowance of such costs to companies predominantly engaged in Government work, and the allowance of them to other companies not so engaged."

Calls for Conference

Mr. McFarlane said that while his organization is "sympathetic to the Department's desire to adopt a single comprehensive set of cost principles," NSIA does not believe a set of rules can be applied to all types of contracts "unless the Department of Defense is prepared to recognize the allowability of all normal and legitimate costs of doing business."

NSIA recommended that no action be taken on the draft until the differences of opinion are resolved across a Government-Industry conference table.

"We are prepared," Mr. McFarlane told the Secretary, "to participate in such a conference at any mutually acceptable time."

Sea Force Plan

President Eisenhower outlined plans for the Navy and Marine Corps force levels during the year starting 1 July in his annual budget message 13 January. Here is what the Chief Executive had to say concerning the Naval Establishment. (See Page 4 for Army statement and Page 8 for Air Force remarks.)

NAVY AND MARINE CORPS—The Navy with an active duty personnel strength of 630,000 on June 30, 1959 will support a total of 864 active ships of which 396 will be warships. This compares with 1,030 active ships, including 402 warships, at the end of 1955. While the total number of warships remains virtually unchanged, the total capability of these ships will be greater because of the increased combat effectiveness of the new ships and aircraft which will have joined the fleet during this period. The number of operating aircraft in the Navy will decline while the number of missiles of all types will increase considerably by June 30, 1959.

The Marine Corps with an active duty strength of 175,000 on June 30, 1959, will continue to support 3 divisions and 3 air wings.

BRIG. GEN. G. W. GALLAWAY, USAF, (right) Division Engineers, Missouri River Division, Corps of Engineers, arrives at the Cheyenne Airport and is met by Col. H. F. Muentzer, USAF, Francis E. Warren Base Commander (left). Gen. Gallaway visited the air base for a discussion of the missile project planned there. Another long-range missile base is at Cooke AFB, Calif. A third base is sought in funds requests now before Congress.

RCA Head Hits Civilian Research Control; Would Unify Service Programs, Command

Brig. Gen. David Sarnoff, USAR-Ret., Chairman of the Board of Radio Corporation of America and a member of the Rockefeller Special Studies committee, has criticized suggestions to place research in a separate agency outside the Defense Department, similar to the Atomic Energy Commission.

Testifying before the Senate Preparedness subcommittee 13 January, General Sarnoff said that such a step is "neither necessary nor desirable at the present time."

Brig. Gen. Sarnoff

"I recommend," he said, "that the Army, Navy and Air Force continue their own research and development organizations in order to advance solutions of their special problems. As weapons become more complex, it is important that military people develop the operational concept, logistic support and personnel simultaneously with the development of the weapons."

General Sarnoff stressed that the Assistant Secretary of Defense for Research should have over-all authority to coordinate all Service research programs, and should have both the authority and the funds to make any necessary additional research contracts.

The RCA Chairman strongly endorsed Rockefeller proposals to bring all general and flag officers into a single service, and have all the Armed Forces operate in unified, functional commands.

It is advisable, the General said, that the anti-missile missile program be separated from the rest of the missile work. The director of the anti-missile missile program should report directly to the Secretary of Defense. He should have, General Sarnoff said, cognizance over research and development funds and authority to make systems and procurement decisions.

On the subject of earth satellites General Sarnoff recommended that a coordinated program, using "all available capabilities wherever they exist," should be organized under a single control. As of now, he said, "it is logical that this control be placed in the office of the Secretary of Defense."

"We should bring together all programs now in the several departments and orient them to the common purpose of obtaining the maximum amount of scientific data in the minimum time," he said. "As we proceed, it might become advisable to assign direction of certain aspects of the basic scientific work to some non-military agencies of the Government."

To bolster the nation's educational position, General Sarnoff urged the prompt establishment of a National Educational Reserve made up of qualified teachers of science and mathematics to be drawn from the ranks of industry. "I propose," he said, "that industrial concerns release—with full pay for at least one year—a reasonable number of men and women for teaching assignments in nearby high schools."

Builders of Defense

CHRYSLER CORP. has received more than $52 million in Army contracts for the Jupiter IRBM and Redstone missiles; $21.8 million will cover partial 1958 purchases of the Redstone. The remainder will be for Jupiter procurement.

LEAR, INC., Grand Rapids, Mich., has received an Air Force production contract for a specially-designed cockpit instrumentation and Gyro references for use in the Air Force's newly-developed integrated panel cockpit display. Developed in conjunction with the Wright Air Development Center, Dayton, Ohio, the production units will be installed in all F-105 and F-106 type aircraft.

TEMCO AIRCRAFT CORP., has moved into a new headquarters at Garland, Tex., near Dallas. About 3,000 employees will be housed in the new facilities.

GOVERNMENT PERSONNEL MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE CO. has announced the appointment of Maj. Neil J. Sweeney, USAR, as its representative to service the Ft. Bliss, Tex., area. Recently released from active duty after service with Fifth Army Headquarters, Major Sweeney now resides at 5004 Andes Drive, El Paso.

PAGE COMMUNICATIONS ENGINEERS, INC., has appointed Herbert H. Schenck as Director of Engineering. During WW II Mr. Schenck served as a lieutenant colonel in the Army Signal Corps.

CURTISS WRIGHT CORP., Wood-Ridge, N. J., gave a testimonial dinner 8 January, honoring Kenneth J. Bordecker, Assistant to the Vice-President for Sales of its Wright Aeronautical Division. Following service in the Navy during WW I he was associated with various motor companies before joining the Wright company in 1923.

AMERICAN MACHINE & FOUNDRY CO. will build a fully automated shell filling line for the Joliet, Ill., Arsenal. Designed by AMF's Mechanics Research Department in Chicago, the system will handle either 75 or 90 mm shells.

INTERNATIONAL TELEPHONE AND TELEGRAPH CORP. announced an electric collision avoidance system that will protect even the fastest jet airliners from mid-air collision. Present for the disclosure 10 January at the Air Transport Association Meeting in Los Angeles, Calif., were representatives of the Civil Aeronautics Administration; the Airline Pilots' Association; airframe manufacturers; the Armed Forces; Stanford Research Laboratories; the commercial airlines; IT&T's Federal Telecommunication Laboratories and Federal Telephone and Radio Company.

LOCKHEED MISSILE SYSTEMS DIVISION is constructing test facilities for the Air Force missile program at its 4,000 acre test site in the Santa Cruz mountains, south of San Francisco. Fifty Lockheed scientists and technicians have already moved to the new site.

AMERICAN TELEPHONE AND TELEGRAPH CO., New York City, has received a Department of Defense award for outstanding cooperation with reservists and reserve activities. Presentation was made by Radm. Milton E. Miles, USN, Commandant of the Third Naval District, to Mr. H. T. Killingsworth, Vice President in charge of Long Lines.

NORRIS THERMADOR CORP., Los Angeles, Calif., has received more than $1 million in contracts for rocket and missile components for Army and Navy programs. Largest contract was for rocket chambers for the Navy's Polaris IRBM.

DoD Wants To Revamp Industry Planning; Massive Attack Effects Are Under Study

The Defense Department has told Congress that present systems of production-allocation and broad-scale industry planning will have to be modified in line with new weapons systems and revised concepts of warfare.

Defense Department reports, cited in the Seventh Annual Report of the Joint Committee on Joint Production, "Watchdog Committee," reveal that "the existing program will have to be modified to meet a greater variety of contingencies than those for which the program was designed."

Massive Attack Danger

"It is reported," the committee says, "that new planning systems will be introduced to meet the possibility of direct massive attack on the United States and to cover other problems of mobilizing industry." It is further indicated that the existing system with some modification will continue to apply to planning for other types of aggression.

The report states that a nuclear attack would present problems vastly different from those encountered in the past and the conventional concept of a tremendous increase in defense production after a war has started is clearly impractical.

Under new strategic concepts, the report says, military planning emphasis is placed on supplies on hand rather than post-M-day production.

Dispersion Waivers

Based on this supplies-on-hand concept, the report says, is the justification for recent waivers of dispersion criteria for expansion of existing airplane plants and research and development laboratories.

In discussing the disposition of 42,000 unassigned Defense Department tools, the Committee urged proper safeguards to prevent the repetition of critical delays which occurred in both WW II and the Korean War. In these two wars, the report says, machine tool shortages resulted in a two year bottleneck in the production of vitally needed military items.

Money Stalls Army Trucks; Replacement Program Hit, Research Money Lacking

Lack of funds is forcing the Army to keep in service 3,000 over-age trucks it wanted to retire long ago. Vital truck development programs also are being stalled.

The Army tried to get rid of its ancient vehicles last June, and issued a regulation implementing its decision. When denied replacement money, it was forced to keep the trucks in service.

Again, the Army sought funds for an annual replacement program in the Fiscal Year 1959 budget. Informed sources say this request was also denied.

As early as 1946, the late Maj. Gen. Everett S. Hughes, Army Chief of Ordnance, pushed strongly for an annual truck replacement program to keep a modern and efficient vehicular operation going. Since that time Army spokesmen on all levels have stressed the necessity of initiating a regular replacement plan. Their pleas were to little avail.

"Atomic Trucks" Might Help

Speaking recently before the National Press Club (THE JOURNAL 28 December) General Maxwell D. Taylor, Army Chief of Staff, noted that "I have had to argue very strongly for an annual replacement program for our motor transport. Someone has suggested that the only way to be sure of getting such a program is to have our research and development people produce a truck with an atomic warhead."

"With that assist," he said, "we might have a reasonable chance of putting wheels under the automotive program."

General Taylor isn't the only one who has been plugging for more modern trucks.

"Motor transport for the Transportation Corps of the future," said Maj. Gen. Paul F. Yount, retiring Chief of the Army Transportation Corps, in a recent article, "demands development of faster, more efficient vehicles to handle heavy loads over poor terrain in adverse weather. Trucks with increased capabilities for off-road operations are needed, as well as a sufficient quantity of vehicles or truck trailer combinations which can be air transported and which have large capacity and low ground pressure."

GOER Doesn't Go

The Armed Forces' continuing need for improved ground transport has been under study by the Army Armor Board for over two years. The result of the board's studies has been the GOER concept of vehicles, each of which will possess the following main features: large diameter, low-pressure tires; two wheeled prime mover with positive powered wagon steer; exoskeletal design and inherent floatability on inland waterways; improved ratio of payload to gross weight; rear wheel traction, at least in low and reverse gears; and simplicity.

The combination of GOER features in a single vehicle, Army authorities say, will enable a vehicle to negotiate an almost infinite variety of terrain features.

To date the Army has no operational vehicles based upon the GOER concept. None are in production. No development contracts for GOER vehicles have been issued. Prospects for development contracts this year are described as very slim.

Navy Awards Funds For Regulus II Bird; Slated For First Nuclear Missile Sub

The Navy announced 14 January that an additional contract for approximately $26.2 million has been awarded to the Chance Vought Aircraft Company for continued evaluation and production of the REGULUS II guided-missile.

Implicit in the contract are provisions for spare parts and special support equipment estimated at an additional $7.4 million, the Pentagon said.

REGULUS II is the guided-missile which was fired successfully 13 November 1957 at Edwards AFB, Calif. in the first launching with rocket-boosters of the new 11-ton 57-foot surface-to-surface weapon.

The 1,000-mile-plus-range missile, designed by Chance Vought to exceed speeds of Mach 2, was fired under a close approximation of shipboard conditions, making this test a major milestone toward introducing REGULUS II to the fleet. It is an advanced successor to the Navy's currently operational REGULUS I.

REGULUS II is destined to go aboard submarines such as the Navy's first nuclear-powered missile sub, the USS HALIBUT, now under construction, and to fit into the weapons system concept of submarines in both oceans which can rise to the surface and within minutes launch a nuclear warhead missile and then submerge immediately, while the missile is guided on to its target hundreds of miles away.

The first order placed with Chance Vought for REGULUS II missiles was dated December, 1956. Described as "the most remarkable bird development," REGULUS II's existence was revealed earlier that year in May.

Navy "Hump" Plan Founders On Hill

temps would have to be released, retired or reverted.

Another of the Chairman's objections to the Navy plan is that it would create a "dangerous precedent" by giving retired officers retired-pay credit for service which they have not performed. Under the Navy plan, officers retired early would be given credit for half the number of years which they previously were "guaranteed" but not permitted to complete. That is, a commander, who is assured 25 years' service under present law, but who is forced to retire under the Navy plan after he has completed only 20 years' service, would be given 23 years' credit for retirement pay purposes.

Mr. Kilday's objection to this feature of the bill is curiously complicated, however, by the fact that he believes officers forced out under the proposal are entitled to the full, 26-year credit, if entitled to any part of it.

He indicated that either full or half-credit would be a "dangerous" step, because it would open the door to similar requests from the Army and Air Force, about which there has been considerable talk.

Pentagon Softens Officer-Punishment Plan; Sends New UCMJ Revision To Hill

The Department of Defense has softened its plan to harden non-judicial punishment of officers involved in minor misconduct.

At present, CO's can fine officers of their commands half of one month's pay for certain types of minor offenses.

Two years ago, the Pentagon said this would be increased to one-half of three months' pay. In a new proposal now before the Congress, Defense officials have lowered their sights to one-half of two months' pay.

A newly-requested revision of the Uniform Code of Military Justice also grants commanding officers increased authority to punish enlisted men.

Plans to revise the military justice rules were first drafted and sent to the Congress in May 1955. However, hearings were not initiated until 1956 and because they ran too late in the session, the proposal failed to win enactment in the 84th Congress.

For unexplained reasons, the Department of Defense did not resubmit the plan last year.

The new version, which has been referred to the House and Senate Armed Services Committees, differs only slightly in its major provisions from the original plan.

Vought Vocabulary

cham' pi· on: the fighter whose record is written on aviation's most honored trophies

Again the aviation world salutes the F8U-1 Crusader. The Collier Trophy, one of America's highest tributes, has been awarded to the Navy and to Chance Vought for 1957's most significant aviation achievement: development of this record-smashing jet fighter.

The Crusader's first triumph was the 1,015 mph national speed record that won the coveted Thompson Trophy. Next came history's first cross-continent, ocean-to-ocean, carrier-to-carrier flight. Following that flight, a Crusader streaked across the nation in "Operation Bullet." This 203-minute flight set an official world's record and marked the first supersonic crossing of the U. S.

The blazing performance that has taken aviation's top honors brings unmatched air combat strength to the U. S. Navy. The Vought Crusader is now aboard Fleet carriers... strengthening America's power for peace.

Eliminate Changed Petition

In addition to softening the punishment proposal for officers, the Pentagon made only three other major changes.

The new plan eliminates a section which would have reduced from 30 to 15 days the time within which an accused, permitted to petition the Court of Military Appeals for a grant of review.

The Department originally said the 15-day period was "unnecessarily long" and that it delayed disposition of cases. Mention of this change has now been erased from the proposal.

In another change, only commanding officers in the grade of major or lieutenant commander or above are authorized to mete out "company" punishment. They are authorized to confine enlisted members of their commands for a full week or take away half of one month's pay. Under the previous plan, this authority was granted to all CO's, irrespective of rank.

The revised version also carries a new proviso which authorizes forfeiture of pay and allowances, on the date the sentence is approved by convening authority for those sentenced to death.

Court Action Costly

Commanding officers who exercise court-martial jurisdiction are permitted to take away half of an officer's pay for two months. The Pentagon says the current limitation (one-half of one month's pay) has proved "unsatisfactory" and "not cured by the fact that an officer may be tried by a special court-martial."

Secretary of the Air Force James Douglas, who submitted the legislation for the Defense Department, said "An officer's present and future value within his command is seriously impaired by the publicity attendant to trial by court-martial." And, he added, such trials are costly in terms of "time, money and manpower" because they mean that the officer must be transferred to another command regardless of how the trial comes out.

Pentagon Proposals

In addition, the proposal:

- Makes it easier for the Services to obtain convictions on "bad-check" charges.

- Extends to two years the time within which an accused may petition for a new trial.

- Permits the Judge Advocate General to decide whether to drop charges entirely when the Court of Military Appeals or a review board demands a re-hearing.

- Permits an accused to request trial before a single qualified officer, instead of a multiple-member special court-martial. In such cases, the convening authority must consent to the request.

- Authorizes officers who convene a court-martial to order immediate execution of all parts of a sentence except dismissal, dishonorable discharge or conduct discharge. They may not take such action if the case affects a general or flag officer, or if the sentence extends to death.

- Authorizes the law officer of the court to make the final ruling when a motion is entered to find the defendant "guilty."
